In late June, Black Desert Online patch 2.3 made its way onto the servers, which means that we have a few more months before the next major expansion will release. To give the player base a bit of time to prepare and to take some load off the developers, we have decided to release some of the recent quality-of-life updates. Included here are a few updates that players might find useful. However, you should know that everything is a work in progress and that we will be continuing to work on the game as we move forward. Please note that not all of the bug fixes and quality-of-life improvements in the changelog below are available to everyone, so we advise you not to use the changelog as a guide.
